

| TYPE/HITS        | SPEED                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | TURNS       | SHIELDS | ARMOUR        | TURRETS          |
|------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|---------|---------------|------------------|
| Escort/1         | 25 cm                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 90°         | 1       | 5+            | 3                |
| ARMAMENT         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | RANGE/SPEED |         | FIREPOWER/STR | FIRE ARC         |
| Weapons battery  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 45 cm       |         | 2             | Left/front/right |
| Disruptor Cannon |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 30 cm       |         | 1             | Front            |
| SPECIAL          | <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>The Pthuxutl disruptor cannon is an inefficient and cumbersome but easily-duplicated weapon system. It functions as a standard lance in all respects.</li><li>Pthuxutl war cruisers cannot be used in any fleet allied with the Orks.</li></ul> |             |         |               |                  |
|                  | OPTIONS <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>The Pthuxutl War Cruiser has a Xenotech: Ship Defense Grid (turrets +1) already included in its profile.</li></ul>                                                                                                                      |             |         |               |                  |

Ordo Xenos Dossier: The Pthuxutl

The Pthuxutl hail from a remote system in Segmentum Tempestus extremely difficult to reach via the warp. They are fiercely isolationist, and by nature they are extremely reclusive and prefer to completely shun contact with other races. Despite this, they have made themselves known to the Imperium of Man, and it is only by subtlety, their relatively unimpressive level of technology and the limited threat they represent that they have managed to escape close Imperial scrutiny. Until encountered by the Rogue Trader Simonies Knocke, it is widely believed that their only contact with other races has been with the Orks, with whom they maintain a nearly incessant state of conflict. It is speculated by some that they have had or currently maintain contact with both the Demiurg and the Eldar, though this has not been confirmed.

While they refer to their combat vessels by a term that roughly translates to “space cruiser of war,” their largest warships are in a displacement range similar to most Imperial frigate classes. Continuing Ork raids have fostered a siege culture among the Pthuxutl, and they maintain a significantly large number of these vessels throughout their home system. Their ships are nominally warp-capable, but they rarely venture out into the greater galaxy beyond the small number of systems they inhabit, typically using small flotillas of their war-cruisers on patrols against threats their homeworld may face. This has increased significantly since encountering Imperial Rogue Traders, which may be an attempt by them to determine the sphere of influence of Mankind’s domain. They have been known on occasion to provide their services to Rogue Traders as particularly effective “flak escorts” protecting against enemy ordnance, and the Rogue Trader Simonies Knocke in particular retains a number of their unique and strangely designed vessels as a permanent part of his fleet. The Adeptus Mechanicus has expressed a passing fascination for these vessels, but as they possess no new technological advances of real significance, demand for them has not proven lucrative enough to warrant an expedition to capture more.

A detailed survey of a Pthuxutl “war cruiser” revealed that while they possess a unique disruptor cannon as their primary weapon, it is complex and inefficient when compared to Imperial plasma lance designs of similar range and destructive power. However, their attempts to counter Ork attacks resulted in a turret design fully integrated with its primary laser batteries that is the most comprehensive ever encountered in a vessel of its displacement. It is speculated that based on their level of technology, this particular system may have been developed with unknown Xenos influence.

FLEET LISTS

Rogue Traders in other fleets (pg. 168), Exploration Fleet List (pg. 170), Pirates and Wolf Packs (pg. 172), Tau Commerce Protection Fleet List (pg. 436), Demiurg and Kroot Xenos Fleet List (pg. 468)