SPECIAL - Rogue Trader cargo vessels have more in common with true warships than typical freighters, giving up a significant portion of their cargo capacity to mount warship-grade weapons and engineering plants. They move +4D6 when under All Ahead Full special orders as warships do. - They are worth one assault point in planetary assault scenarios when within 30 cm of the planet edge and count as a half-transport (rounding DOWN) in scenarios that require transports. This means that if it is the only one remaining in a convoy scenario, it counts as zero. - When included in a Rogue Trader escort squadron and not being used as a transport in scenarios that require them, it offers +1 Ld to Reload Ordnance by ensuring escorts have a ready supply of torpedoes before the battle. This effect is not cumulative if there is more than one Rogue Trader cargo vessel in the escort squadron.
OPTIONS Fast Clipper: Instead of taking a refit normally, for no extra cost this vessel type can be converted to a fast clipper by entirely removing its primary battery armament for the Advanced Drive Technology refit on [??]

Rogue Traders necessarily make use of a wide range of freighters and other cargo ships to transport their wares back to Imperial space as well as to serve as personal conveyances as needs arise. The danger Rogue Traders face on their journeys into wilderness space and beyond the Imperium's borders is significant enough that they will commonly upgun their cargo ships where capacity permits. Such alterations are rarely permanent, and Rogue Traders will often abandon some of their escort's weaponry or additional power generating systems to make space for more lucrative cargoes as and when they chance upon it or the need arises. However, where a Rogue Trader's business calls for him to actively engage in combat, armed cargo ships are likely to be a common feature of his personal escort.
