SPECIAL

- The profile above represents a whole variety of alien vessels that may be found in a Rogue Trader's personal escort. Since Rogue Traders tend to choose vessels for certain specific purpose, many of the Xenos vessels employed as mercenaries will be similar, though never entirely identical. For this reason, a single ship profile is used, but to better represent the great variety of Xenos vessels that may be encountered in the 41st millennium, each Xenos vessel also has one selected xenotech system as described in the Rogue Trader special rules. This system does not cost extra points and may be selected by the owning player for free, whether they are used in a Rogue Trader fleet, as pirate raiders or even their own, independent squadron of Xenos warships. However, all Xenos Vessels of the same type or race must all use the same refit, though multiple types or races may be in the same fleet, each easily identified by distinctly different models.
- The following pages feature a few of those variants with distinct names, all of them cost 50 points and have chosen one of the xenotech systems that is already included in their profile.
- *Xenos vessel weapon systems, like the vessels themselves, represent a wide variety of technologies. While the weapon systems may take any form and be described in any manner desired, their behavior will be as the weapons indicated in the Xenos Vessel profile. It can only be modified by one of the Xenotech systems described on [??]

Contact with alien races is without doubt the habit for which Rogue Traders gain the most notoriety. Their exploration and trading missions necessarily take them to regions of space beyond Imperial control, sometimes for years at a time. In these regions there is every chance of finding thriving, spacefaring alien cultures, even alien empires spanning several systems. Rogue Traders can gain much of value and interest from these races, and are certainly not above employing them as mercenaries when the situation demands.

Far from home, where the protection of the Imperial Navy is but a hopeless dream, many Rogue Traders instead hire out vessels and their crews from among the alien races they encounter. These vessels often provide much-needed local knowledge, as well as the ability to overcome cultural or linguistic barriers
